retail liquor dealers, and went into possession of that firm.

The one hundred and sixteenth and one hundred and seventeenth counts specify the quantity of whiskey transferred, and the allegation is that, without first making entries, the Phil G. Kelly Company transferred distilled spirits to McClure & Sullivan without first making entries, as required by law. From the chain of evidence, as outlined in the Indictment, it appears that the government will endeavor to show that the Phil G. Kelly Company (Inc.) has acted as a distributor for certain distillers, all operating in the vicinity of Richmond, who have evaded the revenue laws and have marketed their product and saved to them-selves the government tax of $1.10 per sallon.

extending over a period from August 1, 1909, to March 29, 1910, and specify that whiskey in quantities varying from 100 to 400 gallons, were received by the Phil G. Kelly Company (Inc.), which falled to make any entry as reconfident that they do not livove any moral wrong whatever. A full investigation of the formation contained in the incorporated liquor firm, and that no entry was made whereby the gallons of whereby the gallons of whiskey was received by the Phil G. Kelly Company (Inc.), which failed to make any entry as required by section 2318 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. It appears from the indictment that the violations occurred at frequent intervals in August, and the intervening months until the investigations closed on March 29, in order to allow the district attorney time in which to prepare papers for presentation at this term of the court. The summary of the information contained in these numerous counts indicates that 20,300 gallons of whiskey was received by the incorporated liquor firm, and that no entry was made whereby the government might collect its proportion of taxes.

As the action is taken against an incorporated company no bench warrant was sworn out yesterday; but, as explained by Mr. Talley, a summons will be issued and served to-day, and will be made returnable forthwith. "I see no reason why the case should not come to trial immediately," said Mr. Talley. "The government is ready now to proceed with the prosecution."

Distillers in Arrears.

In connection with the prosecution of the Phil G. Kelly Company, it is interesting to note that no legal action has been offered against any distillery, but it is said that several of the Henrico distilleries are in arrears, and that against one of them an assessment of between $30,000 and $4.0,000 has been made to defray shortages in the payment of taxes to the government. Colonel Chapman said yesterday that the investigations by Interesting to note that no legal action has been offered against any distillery; but it is said that several of the Henrico distilleries are in arrears, and that against one of them an assessment of between $30,000 and $40,000 has been made to defray shorting on the payment of taxes to the government. Colonel Chapman said the present strike of the miners in the Middle West will greatly benefit the business of this district. The operators say that it not only means while not inspired by developments in the trial of a case against D. E. formerly Deputy United States Marshal under Morgan Treat, was detailed to make the investigations, and it is said he has filed a written complaint, which is in the hands of the district attorney, and which served as a basis for the drawing of the indictment. Major Enright, it is alleged, has traced wagons laden with whiskey from the distillery into Richmond, and as he has not been long in the service, was not suspected by the alleged violators, who considered him in the government service in connection with the enforcement of the new corporation tax law.

Did Not Suspect Him. Did Not Suspect Him.

Further, it is said that neither the distillers nor representatives of the company under indictment suspected that their operations were being watched until several weeks ago, but even after this did not seem to prevent a recurrence of the alleged efforts to swindle the government out of the taxes. Major Enright's experiences, according to some who know of them, will make interesting reading, and will, they say, show the servery with which the operations for carrying out the suspected plan were perfected. Major Enright would not discuss the case yesterday.

It is significant, in connection with the indictment, while no insinuation has been made that any official at Richmond is responsible for the failure to collect the government's share of taxes, that the following letter, dated March 31, was received here Saturday from Commissioner of Revenue Royal E. Bijou-"The Joy Riders."

No Speed Limit There,
Bizzy Izzy sailed into the Bijou last night on one of the grandest "joy rides" seen in Richmond for a long while. Although he was threatened with a fine on several occasions, he got through all right, the policeman informing him that he was traveling at the rate of two hours a week.
Every one knows that George Sidney is one of the cleverest comedians who ever tripped along the boards of the Bijou and he has a bunch with fim this time that is not two steps behind.

Dick Hume, the detective, is se Dick Hume, the detective, is so clever that he makes you laugh until you think yon can't laugh any more, but as long as he is in sight you keep it up. Frank Melton was also good, especially when he got off his, local parodies. The De Long sisters did very well and brought down the house in their last act. Other members of the company did well in their places, while the chorus held up its end from the old ones to the youngest. This "Joy Ride" is perfectly harmless and is full of fun. There are many laughs coming to any one who many laughs coming to any one who goes to see it.

Cohan Comedy To-Night.
"Something to appeal to all classes of theatre-goers," might well be the appellation applied to George M. Cohan's well-known musical play, "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway," with Charley Brown in his original character of "Kid Burns" and Elizabeth Drew as "Mary," which Cohan and Harris will present at the Academy to-night and Wednesday and Wednesday matinee. First of all, it is a serious drama, quite independent of anything else. It has an interesting, well worked out story, acted by a company of capable players. Then, too, it is a comedy of no mean merit, being filled with delightful scenes and dialogue.

Marie Cabill.

After an absence of some time, Marie Cabill comes to the Academy Thursday night in her latest musical success, "The Boys and Betty." Last season Miss Cabill played an extended engagement in New York at Wallack's Theatre with this music play, and it was universally commended by the critics. Who declared it to be the one same and consistent production of its kind to have been seen in the metropolis for a long time. "The Boys and Betty" is by George V. Hobart, who provided the book and lyrics, but who admits that he drew his inspiration from a French farce called "La Papillon," while the music is by Silvio Hein, the youngest of American composers.
